

Station 9

What do you notice?
What do you wonder?

notice
many detailed, personal goals for self-improvement

Core Competencies
student self
assessments/reflections
Gr K-7

A range of self'
assessments / reflections
(e.g., interview, images, scales). What other ways can be assess students?

Notice
Goals around communicating with others, and working & learning in groups.

When students
reflect too often
or not enough, the reflections become
just a "job to finish."
How to strike a balance so it is meaningful.

Wonder
How much do our students understand
about the language &
terms used in the core - Competencies?

wonder, K/1
in a younger class, self-reflections tend to be guided/assisted by a teacher. How do we frame reflections in a way where they don't feel the teacher is "grading" them

How can we cultivate a space where students feel comfortable being honest about their strengths/weaknesses in their reflections?

How do we foster
self-awareness / encourage self-
reflection?

Do students understand
what's being asked?
↳ some of the language in the Core Competencies seems catered to teachers rather than students.

• What's the next step
once students have self-reflected?
I wonder how many students feel that their reflections are genuine and not prompted by the teachers

there is great range of ability to reflect themselves.

How can we make ❤ reflecting more genuine?
